PREFACE

In presenting the One Hundred and Thirteenth Edition of the City of Hamilton Directory, we thank our advertisers, subscribers and the community in general for the generous support they have given us.

Once again, postal codes have been included in the street directory (pink section). They are prominently located after each street intersection description and shown in italics.

The Directory includes the names of many persons who are employed in the City but live outside it.

The Population of the Region (1982) 542,095; Hamilton (1982) 306,434.

On January 1, 1974, the City of Hamilton became part of the Regional Municipality of Hamilton-Wentworth, while at the same time retaining its identity as a city in a two-tier system of regional government.

The other members of the Hamilton-Wentworth Region are the Towns of Ancaster, Dundas, and Glanbrook, the City of Stoney Creek and the Township of Flamborough. Residents of these municipalities, together with the residents of the City of Burlington (which is part of the Regional Municipality of Halton), are listed in a separate publication, the Burlington and Hamilton Suburban Directory.

Hamilton - A Brief History

DUNDURN CASTLE, built in 1832 by Sir Alan MacNab who was Prime Minister of Upper Canada from 1854 to 1856. Named after his home in Scotland it was never a castle in the military sense, but nearby are located the earthworks on Burlington Heights from which British troops left to repel the invading American forces at Stoney Creek in 1813. Now completely restored, the castle is open daily to visitors.

ONE DAY IN SEPTEMBER 1669, LaSalle, the French explorer, and a small band of adventurers entered Macassa Bay (now Hamilton Harbor) from Lake Ontario, crossed in their canoes and landed on its northern shores where they were met by a friendly band of Indians. This landing-place of LaSalle is now a natural park, which will ever bear his name. During their short stay these intrepid explorers charted the beautiful natural harbor and the surrounding countryside, and recorded the first survey of the site of Hamilton, the present industrial centre of Canada.

History tells us that LaSalle was the first white man to set foot on or near the site of the now important City of Hamilton, and though it was more than a century later before the first real settlers came and laid the foundations of the city that was to be, and now is, the name of LaSalle will always occupy a place in the city's archives.

ARRIVAL OF UNITED EMPIRE LOYALISTS

Though LaSalle had come, and seen and gone, the Indians continued in practically undisputed possession of the entire district until the United States proclaimed their independence, when there was a great influx into Canada of loyalists who wished to preserve their allegiance to their Mother Country and desired to continue to live on British soil.

The first of these settlers to arrive and locate on a 300 acre farm which is now occupied by one of Hamilton's busiest manufacturing and business districts was Robert Land, who, in 1778, erected Hamilton's first home — a log cabin that stood at the corner of Barton and Leeming Streets. At about the same time Richard Beasley opened a trading post on the site now occupied as Dundurn Park and took up some 1,000 acres of land in the present city. Others soon followed and when the first survey of the district was made in 1791 there were thirty-one families settled in the neighborhood.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME

The war of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States was responsible for the City being given the name of "Hamilton." To be beyond the range of possible conflict, George Hamilton, son of Honorable Robert Hamilton, moved westward from Niagara-on-the-Lake, and purchased a tract of property which includes the heart of Hamilton's present commercial, financial and retail district, and in the year 1813 this tract was surveyed as a town site and named "Hamilton."

Incidentally, Hamilton in the same year became a point of no small military importance, for when General Vincent, commanding the British forces retired from the Niagara frontier he took up his stand on Burlington Heights and operating from that base repelled the invading forces at the Battle of Stoney Creek in June, 1813, thus definitely determining the future of the Dominion of Canada as an important part of the British Empire. The Stoney Creek battlefield, east of the City, is still preserved as a public park, and the site where the British forces made their successful stand is marked by a suitable monument, that can be seen for miles around.

Strategically located, even in those early days, Hamilton soon gained prominence as an important trading centre. By 1840 the population had reached a total of 6,832 and during the course of that same year another bright page was added to early Canadian history, for it was then that Hamilton became a city.

In terms of industrial production Hamilton ranks third among the cities of Canada. The city's population Region (1979) 407,758.

McMaster University

McMaster University, founded in Toronto in 1887 through the merger of the Toronto Baptist College and Woodstock College, has grown steadily through the years to become one of the country's leading institutions of post-secondary education and research. On its present Hamilton campus since 1930, and non-sectarian since 1957, McMaster now has grown to more than 10,000 full-time undergraduate and graduate students.

Nuclear studies have been emphasized at McMaster since the early 1950's. Sophisticated equipment, including a "pool-type" reactor and two particle accelerators, provide the means for faculty and students to carry on programs of research in the nuclear field, including the use of radioactive tracers in biological studies.

The McMaster Health Sciences Centre, opened in 1972, has become known around the world for its exciting innovations both in the design of the building and the methods of teaching employed there. The building, four stories high, each story of seven acres in area, houses both the Faculty of Health Sciences and the McMaster University Medical Centre, the latter encompassing facilities for patient care. The Medical School, providing an unusual study approach that spans three calendar years, the School of Nursing, facilities for medical research and for training of health-related professions are located there. The facilities of the Medical Centre, which are integrated within the overall Hamilton District health system, allow students opportunities to observe patients in clinical situations. Both the building and the outstanding staff are readily adaptable to new methods of medical care, teaching and research.
